

heisenberg's uncertainty principle

Jodi Bosin

a squirrel on the porch is eating a chip holding it with both hands the ad before the news says “make the world your workplace” and why the hell would i want to do that remember the dress, i think about it often i never saw white and gold, only blue and black reality, they said, does not exist as something separate from the act of observation we know perception is subjective but still will argue ours til death we need to feel that something could make sense schrödinger's cat was meant to disprove the very idea it represents concepts moved forcibly out of context so much that we can't and will not understand how do you know if your life is examined love is a mystery like sufjan said but so too is its end when a leaf falls off a plant i have a tiny little funeral in my head an electron is not in any fixed place until it is measured it is only in that instant that it appears i walk past someone with a t-shirt that says "the 1940s" white on black, and that's it, nothing on the back i worry about our mailman especially in this heat, he walks so slowly green numbers rain from the sky things that live on like that "S" that you draw with six lines on the flip side of mosquitoes, we have fireflies before you are observed you cannot even be conceived of have you seen the images from hubble² those pics are pretty amazing objects are closer than they appear if you fall in the forest i will listen
